Mississauga Valleys

Community Profile

History

Mississauga Valleys was historically known as a part of the village of Cooksville, settled in the 1820s and centred around the Hurontario Street and Dundas Street intersection. Mississauga Valleys was predominantly vacant except for a few widely scattered single-family dwellings. The only City's designated heritage building in the area, the Cherry Hill House, was built in 1822. Until 1975, when it moved further north to the current location at 680 Silver Creek Boulevard to become a restaurant, the Cherry Hill House had a variety of uses. At various times it has been used as a residence, a Tea Garden, a tavern and a boarding house for the Cooksville Shale Brick Company located north of Dundas

Street and west of Hurontario Street.

The Mississauga Valleys District area remained predominantly rural until the mid 1950s when detached and semi-detached dwellings began to develop along the west side of Cawthra Road. In the late 1960s, the major landowner and developer, S.B. McLaughlin Associates Limited, began to develop the remainder of the Mississauga Valleys District area, comprised of approximately 290 hectares (720 acres) of land, for detached dwellings, semi-detached dwellings, townhouses, apartments, commercial centres, schools, parks and open spaces. Most of the housing stock in the district was built in the 1970s.

Today, Mississauga Valleys is an established residential community, providing a variety of housing types. The District is served by a number of retail centres and a community centre.
